University-Industry Contracts Webinar Series A UIDP Academy Event

Attend this series of nine webinars to learn the ins and outs of university-industry (U-I) research contracting from leading experts from the University Industry Demonstration Partnership (UIDP), the premier organization for identifying better approaches to addressing these contracting issues. Webinar presenters will do a deep dive into some of the most contentious issues and allow participants the opportunity to engage and ask questions they are facing in their day job.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

The webinar can be used as a training tool for any university or industry contracting professional, such as contract negotiators, sponsored research administrators, or others who are interested in learning more about this topic. This is a great opportunity to pull together your contracting staff for a refresher on specific research contracting topics. Gather your team in a conference room, feed them, listen to the webinar, and discuss organization-specific policies as they relate to the webinar topic.

WHAT IS THE LEARNING VALUE OF THE SERIES?

This webinar series allows for interaction with experts on sponsored research contracting with extensive Q&A sessions and modern approaches. You will hear from experts about common clauses, issues of contention, and how to address the challenges of negotiating industry sponsored research agreements. Institutions use the UIDP Contract Accords as practical guidance and detailed reference material to help both parties understand typical issues, address them, and thereby collaborate more effectively.

Here's what UIDP industry member representatives have to say about the webinar series:

"The University/Industry Demonstration Partnership has done an outstanding job of capturing the main points on a variety of negotiation topics and agreement types that are present in that University-Industry collaboration space. The Contract Accords contain a tremendous amount of information gained through years of collective experience that is understandable and useful. Time spent participating in the webinar series will be time well-spent."
