Using Research Data to Enhance Collaborations
During this workshop, case studies will be presented that provide specific examples how data can be used to develop strategies through the use of objective data. Having decided to rebrand itself as an information analytics company, Elsevier has been investing in the development of systems that can help bring efficiency at an enterprise scale. This interactive workshop will provide learnings from across the country and the world; allow for brainstorming with participants on practical steps and expectations; and sharing examples of where it has worked well and learnings from prior experiences.
